Great Mercy! he is dead! END OF CANTO II. SALVESTRA, a Kale of Boccaccio. CANTO III. i. There are in Love distinctions national; For Love the Frenchman seldom dares to die; The Italian often: true, the Son of Gaul Will venture suicide from vanity, . Which he misnames, and with the pageantry Of circumstance theatric decorates. A Frenchman die of love ! Bah! Wilfully, He will parade his quarrel with the fates, And join, in social pact, a band of desperates. II. Splenetic Egotist! from vanity, For a blue riband in his button hole, He who had sworn he ever would be free, Surrendered to Napoleon, branch and bole, His rights, possessions--nay, his heart, his soul, His childrens limbs and lives. If you neglect, He straight will praise himself; for tis the whole Of his existence to command respect, Careless even...
