The handle of the Bigelow instrument must not be boiled. Silver catheters should never be used when soft-rubber or woven ones can be employed, on account of the traumatism they are liable to produce, even in skilful hands. These instruments, with their obturators, or stylets, are washed with soap and hot water, and their interior injected first with hot soapsuds and then with alcohol; they may then be boiled or flamed off with alcohol. The tip beyond the eye should be made solid, so as to prevent any form of dirt or lubricant from collecting there. Litholapaxy tubes: The technic for sterilizing these instruments, together with their obturators or stylets, is exactly the same as that just described for the ordinary silver catheter. Tunnelled catheters: These instruments are cleaned in the same manner as the ordinary silver catheters, great care being taken to see...
