We are taught to notice, also, the wisdom of that providential arrangement which classifies society into different divisions. It is the settled arrangement that the rich and poor meet together. Ye have the poor with you always, said the Son of God. The distribution of men into classes may answer purposes highly essential to the welfare of society. The existence of poverty furnishes occasion for the exercise of virtues which could not be developed under other circumstances. Contentment, patience, resignation are thus fostered among the poor. Compassion, benevolence and generosity among the rich. Thus in both classes dispositions are promoted which tend to draw into close affinity the whole mass of society. Let the prevailing selfishness of mankind exert its power, unchecked by the restraining influence of those virtues which the existence of poverty occasions, and the miseries of the world...
